The Office of Rural Affairs of the Consell de Formentera is pleased to report that 21 and 22 February islanders are invited to attend a free course titled "Organic Livestock: regulatory aspects and sanitary management." The five-hour session will be led by veterinarian and teacher Raquel Servitja Dalmau.

The aim of the course is to highlight the regulatory and technical guidelines of organic livestock farming to optimise production and make it cleaner and more hygienic. Servitja will cover theoretical and practical aspects of regulations around organic production involving sheep, goats and pigs, alternative options for feed and medicine, and tailoring feed and parasite control to prevent disease.

Josep Marí, rural affairs councillor, said the course was designed "to help Formentera's livestock sector use an ecological approach to improve the care and feeding of its animals."

The course for farmers and anyone on the island interested in agricultural training. Registrations are now open at the Citizen Information Office (OAC) and online on the Virtual Citizen Information Office (OVAC). Want more information? Visit the Office of Agriculture (àrea d'Agricultura) at Centre Antoni Tur "Gabrielet" or call the office at 971 32 10 87.

2 February 2023
Communications Office
Consell de Formentera

FORMACIÓ 2023
en matèria de ramaderia
CURS GRATUÏT
Ramaderia ecològica: aspectes normatius i maneig sanitari
21 i 22 de febrer
Horaris:
Dimarts 21, de 18.00 h a 21.00 h
Dimecres 22, de 10.00 h a 12.00 h
Durada del curs: 5 hores
Inscripcions:
Oficina Virtual d'Atenció Ciutadana (OVAC)
Oficina d'Atenció Ciutadana (OAC)
C. de Ramon Llull, 6.
Més informació a l'àrea d'Agricultura
Tel.: 971 32 10 87
Hi col·laboren:
PDR