

Back in town starting this Saturday, 13 June, are the weekly Jazz a la plaça concerts that have become a fixture in summertime cultural programming on Formentera. The concerts, which run from ten in the evening to one in the morning at the plaça de la Constitució, continue through the middle of September.

Topping the list of changes is the incorporation into Jazz&Co—which started the concert series in July of 1994—of two new musicians: Santi Ramírez and Gustavo Rojo.

A native of the mainland city Xàtiva, trumpeter Santi Ramírez received his musical education at Sedajazz and cut his teeth playing with classical music orchestra and jazz bands. Argentina-born Gustavo Rojo has played the baritone saxophone across Spain and in a slew of international festivals.

Beyond the addition Ramírez and Rojo, the rest of the Jazz&Co line-up—Vicent Roselló on bass, Enrique González on guitar, Bruce Gartell on drums and Toni Gartell on bugle and violin—remains unchanged.
